

Rebellion and remembrance
in modern Ireland

EDITED BY
Laurence M. Geary

FOUR COURTS PRESS

Contents

Preface	7
Introduction	9
REBELLION
James S. Donnelly, Jr Sectarianism in 1798 and in Catholic nationalist memory	15
Ruán O'Donnell Foreign enemies and internal rebels: the French War and the United Irishmen in New South Wales	38
Gary Owens Popular mobilisation and the rising of 1848: the clubs of the Irish Confederation	51
Brigitte Anton 'The Irish password is no longer repeal, but revolution': a German view of Ireland's '48	64
REMEMBRANCE
Tadhg O'Sullivan 'The violence of a servile war': three narratives of Irish rural insurgency post-1798	73
Tom Dunne 'Tá Gaedhil bhocht cráidhte': memory, tradition and the politics of the poor in Gaelic poetry and song	93
Maura Cronin Memory, story and balladry: 1798 and its place in popular memory in pre-Famine Ireland	112
Seán Ryder Young Ireland and the 1798 rebellion	135

REPRESENTATION

Robert Mahony

- 'New light' Ulster Presbyterianism and the nationalist rhetoric of John Mitchel 148

Neil McCaw

- Voicing rebellion in Victorian fiction: towards a textual commemoration 159

Sophie Ollivier

- Presence and absence of Wolfe Tone during the centenary commemoration of the 1798 rebellion 175

Orlaith Mannion

- 'Silent but eloquent reminders': the nationalist monuments in Cork and Skibbereen 185

Jonathan M. Wooding

- A monument 'where pilgrims may worship and patriotism be renewed': the sacral nationalism of the Australian '98 centenary 196

Kevin Rockett

- Representations of Irish history in fiction films made prior to the 1916 rising 214

Notes on contributors

229

Index

231