

Notes on contributors

BRIGITTE ANTON works on the Electronic History Project at the Linen Hall Library, Belfast. Her book on Young Ireland and Young Germany is forthcoming from Irish Academic Press.

MAURA CRONIN is a graduate of University College Cork and the University of Leicester and lectures in history at Mary Immaculate College (University of Limerick). She is the author of Country, Class or Craft: The Politicisation of Skilled Artisans in Nineteenth Century Cork (Cork University Press, 1994)

JAMES S. DONNELLY, JR, is Professor of History at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. He is the author of Landlord and Tenant in Nineteenth-Century Ireland (1973), The Land and the People of Nineteenth-Century Cork (1975), and the chapters on the Great Famine in volume v, part 1, of A New History of Ireland (1989). With Samuel Clark, he is the co-editor of Irish Peasants (1983), and with Kerby Miller, he is the co-editor of Irish Popular Culture, 1650-1850 (1998). He is currently writing a book on Knock Shrine and the role of the cult of the Virgin Mary in the development of modern Irish Catholicism.

TOM DUNNE teaches history at National University of Ireland, Cork. His book, Long Shadows: An Historian and His Histories is forthcoming from Geography Publications.

NEIL McCAW is a lecturer in English studies at King Alfred's College, Winchester, where he teaches nineteenth-century culture and literature. His publications include George Eliot and Victorian Historiography: Imagining the National Past, in addition to essays and articles on Victorian literary culture, nineteenth-century historical writing, and the nineteenth-century fashioning of masculine identity.

ROBERT MAHONY is Associate Professor of English at the Catholic University of America, where from 1983 to 1997 he also served as the first Director of its Center for Irish Studies. He has published numerous articles in Irish studies, and his books include Jonathan Swift: The Irish Identity (New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 1995). With Carole Fabricant, he is currently editing a collection of Swift's Irish writings.

ORLAITH MANNION is a graduate of NUI, Galway and of NUI, Cork. She works as an Administrative Officer in the Department of Finance, Dublin.

RUÁN O'DONNELL is a graduate of University College Dublin and of the Australian National University and lectures in history at the University of Limerick. He is the author of several books on the United Irishmen, most recently, Aftermath: Post-Rebellion Insurgency in Wicklow, 1799-1803 (Dublin: Irish Academic Press, 2000). He is currently working on a biography of Robert Emmet and a study of the early colonial period in Australian history.

SOPHIE OLLIVIER is honorary professor of Russian literature at the University Michel de Montaigne Bordeaux 3 and currently lectures at the Alliance Française, Dublin. She is vice-president of the International Dostoevsky Society.

TADHG O'SULLIVAN is a graduate of NUI, Cork, and has been a visiting research scholar at the Huizinga Institute for Cultural History, University of Amsterdam. He is currently pursuing doctoral research at the University of Oxford on narratives of social improvement and national character in Ireland during the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries.

GARY OWENS teaches Irish and British history at Huron College, the University of Western Ontario. Some of his most recent articles have appeared in Irish Historical Studies, History Ireland, Eire-Ireland, Irish Popular Culture, 1650-1850 (Donnelly and Miller, eds) and Ireland: Art into History (Kennedy and Gillespie, eds). He is currently writing a micro-study of the tithe war of the 1830s entitled Carrickshock: Rage, Murder and Remembrance.

KEVIN ROCKETT is a lecturer in film studies at Trinity College Dublin. A specialist in the history of Irish cinema and of representations of the Irish in world cinema, he is co-author of Cinema and Ireland (1987) and Still Irish: A Century of the Irish in Film (1995), and editor/compiler, The Irish Filmography: Fiction Films 1896-1996 (1996). His study of Irish film censorship, The Los Angelesation of Ireland, will be published in 2001.

SEÁN RYDER lectures in the Department of English, National University of Ireland, Galway. He is the author of several articles on aspects of nineteenth-century cultural nationalism, and was co-editor of Gender and Colonialism (1995) and Ideology and Ireland in the Nineteenth Century (1998).

JONATHAN WOODING is a lecturer in the Department of Theology and Religious Studies and the Department of History at the University of Wales, Lampeter. He is the author of Communication and Commerce along the Western Sealanes AD 400-800 (1996), The Vikings (1998), and editor of The Otherworld Voyage in Early Irish literature (2000), and Celtic-Australian Identities (forthcoming).